Browser Testing

Viewing at the webpage side-by-side in the two different browsers, they look identical to me. All of the elements appear where I expect them to and the colors and fonts I used look the same. The only real difference I noticed between the two browsers is that the address bar in Firefox is slightly taller than the one in Chrome, so the contents of the webpage in Firefox are pushed down by a few pixels, but it's only noticeable when you're looking at the two windows right next to each other and it doesn't change anything else about the webpage.
